ABSTRACT

Databases and clearinghouses useful in education are described in this two part document. The first section contains one-page summaries of 55 databases of interest to people in education. The types of information provided by the various databases are indicated, including bibliographies, funding information, statistics, government publications and proceedings, and specific subject areas. Information for each database includes acronym, name of database, major area(s), subjects covered, size of database, date established, publications/print journals, update frequency, thesaurus/search aids, types of source documents, forms of retrievable information, document copies available, information contact, and systems/vendors. The topic question "How can the reading ability of adults be improved?" was used in searching 20 of the databases. Samples from this search follow the entries for each appropriate database, and a reading guide is provided. The second section contains one-page summaries of 12 clearinghouses and provides such information as acronym, major functions, services, publications, a brief description, date established, sponsor, types of source documents, forms of retrievable information, principal clients, and an information contact. FOREWORD

This catalog on information resources is a collaborative effort of the Resource and Referral Service (RRS) and the National Center for Research in Vocational Education. It was originally developed for an Information Resources Workshop held in Springfield, Illinois, last fall to acquaint educators with the many educational resources available to them for improving educational practice. The initial catalog was so well received by the participants at this workshop and others who saw it that RRS was asked to update and expand it for distribution at the 1978 National Dissemination Forum in Washington, D.C. The broad scope of the publication should make it of particular interest to dissemination specialists, education and social science researchers, and educational practitioners.

We are indebted to James V. Bina, John C. Peterson, and Ida Marie Halasz at the National Center for Research in Vocational Education for the development of the catalog. Recognition and appreciation are also due the contact persons associated with each database and clearinghouse for their help in supplying and verifying the information in the catalog.

This publication is one of three companion volumes. Others in the series are:

- Dissemination Networks: Information Resources for Education, ED Materials/Support Center, Far West Laboratory for Educational Research and Development, San Francisco, California.
- Private Organizations and Associations: Information Resources for Education, The Consortium of Associations for Educational Dissemination, 1815 N. Lynn Street, Suite 1000, Arlington, Virginia.

ABSTRACT

Databases and clearinghouses useful in education are described in this paper. There are two major sections in the paper. The first section, Databases, contains one-page summaries of fifty-five databases of interest to people in education. Database types include bibliographies, funding information, statistics, government publications and proceedings, and specific subject areas. Information for interpreting database sheets is provided, including acronym, name of database, major area(s), subjects covered, size of database, date established, publications/print journals, update frequency, thesaurus/search aids, types of source documents, forms of retrievable information, document copies available, information contact, and systems/vendors. The topic question "How can the reading ability of adults be improved?" was used in searching twenty of the databases. Samples from this search follow the one-page summaries of each appropriate database, and a reading guide is provided. The second major section, Clearinghouses, contains one-page summaries of twelve clearinghouses. Information for interpreting clearinghouse sheets is provided, including acronym, name of clearinghouse, major functions, services, publications/literature, description, date established, sponsor, types of source documents, forms of retrievable information, principal clients and information contact.

INTRODUCTION

The publication, Databases and Clearinghouses: Information Resources for Education, is the result of the interest expressed in some of these materials which were originally used in an Information Resources Workshop. The workshop was held October 4 and 5, 1977, at The Illinois Office of Education Building in Springfield, and was cosponsored by The Illinois Office of Education, The Midwest Regional Exchange of the Research and Development Exchange (RDx) at CEMREL, Inc. in St. Louis, and the Resource and Referral Service of RDx at the National Center for Research in Vocational Education, the Ohio State University, Columbus.

There are two major sections in this paper. The first section, Databases, contains one-page summaries of fifty-five databases of interest to people in education. Some of these databases are bibliographic (for example, ERIC, CEC); some are funding information (for example, Foundation Grants Index, GIS); some are statistical (for example, ASI, NCES); some are government publications and proceedings (for example, CIS, CRECORD); and some are specific subject areas (for example, AHL, Energyline). A page describing "How to Interpret Database Sheets" has been included for the reader's convenience.

A computer search of twenty of these databases was conducted. The same topic question, "How can the reading ability of adults be improved?" was used in searching each of the databases. A wide range of citations resulted, varying from fifty-four for ERIC and thirty-two for LLBA to one each for GIS and CRECORD. Samples from this search follow the one-page summaries of each of the twenty databases that were searched. "Search Examples" provides a reading guide for these computer searches.

Special mention should be made of the database, ONTAP, which provides an opportunity for training and practice in the use of online databases.

The second section, Clearinghouses, contains one-page summaries of twelve clearinghouses (for example, ADELL, WEECN). "How to Interpret Clearinghouse Sheets" has been included for the reader's convenience.

The information contained on the one-page summaries for the databases and the clearinghouses was accurate as of the date indicated at the bottom of each page. However, in this rapidly expanding field, many facts on these pages may have changed. Most of the people who verified the information are listed at the bottom of the individual summary pages as the person to contact with additional questions. We thank them for their time and assistance in helping us compile this information.

A companion publication, Dissemination Networks: Information Resources for Education, was prepared by the Far West Laboratory for Educational Research and Development, San Francisco, California. Another document, Private Organizations and Associations: Information Resources for Education, was developed by The Consortium of Associations for Educational Dissemination, Arlington, Virginia.

DATABASES

SEARCH EXAMPLES

A series of computer searches was conducted to show representative results of twenty databases. The same topic: "HOW CAN THE READING ABILITY OF ADULTS BE IMPROVED?" was used in each database. A list of the databases included in this activity begins on the next page.

Databases were searched with one to eight descriptors, depending upon the types of subjects covered in the databases. For example, the search in ERIC necessitated seven descriptors, while CRECORD was limited to one broad descriptor.

The following is an example of the content of the search examples pages. A cross section of appropriate/useful to not appropriate/not useful citations resulting from the searches has been included.

Abstract: The commonalities and differences in teaching basic reading skills to adults and children are related. Undereducated adults generally must traverse the major stages of reading progress, including sensory integration at the initial stage and a strategies for concept attainment at the intermediate and secondary levels; the crucial variables are selecting materials and employing teaching techniques that incorporate the unique interests and experiences of functional illiterates. Adult coping selections, developed at the University of Maine, Portland-Gorham "Right-to-Read" Center, written at the second reader level, are discussed as a means of providing literacy training. AA

GUIDE TO VENDORS OF DATABASES

Introduction

Vendors are commercial organizations which make databases available online. Online databases are organized collections of machine-readable records containing bibliographic and/or document related data. These records are accessed through the vendor's computers. The vendor's on-line service (computer searching) is provided by telephone hookup to the user's computer terminal, usually located in a library or resource center.

Currently three vendors offer most of the databases selected as most useful in education. This brief "Guide" provides basic information about these vendors. Without endorsing a particular vendor, the following chart shows the total number of databases and the number relevant to education that are available from each of these vendors.

How to contract for services is briefly explained under "Initiating Services." All vendors will provide information about their service either by telephone or by mail. Vendors will gladly provide sample newsletters, initiating services information, prices, and other information to organizations, educational institutions, or libraries.

The number of ways in which vendors promote their services is explained briefly under "Using the Services" and "Update Information." Prices of services are not included since they vary considerably for each use. Charges are based upon type of subscription to the service, terminal time (connect hours), telephone charges, databases used, royalty fees (if any), offline prints of citations, and additional options contracted.

Principal Vendors

Name of Service	Vendor	Total Databases (as of 4/26/78)	Education-Relevant Databases in Catalog
BRS	Bibliographic Retrieval Service, Inc. 1462 Erie Boulevard Schenectady, NY 12305 (518) 374-5011 (612) 376-7244	19	17
DIALOG	Lockheed Information Systems 3251 Hanover Street Palo Alto, CA 94304 (800) 227-1960 (toll-free) (415) 493-4411, Ext. 45034	73	40
ORBIT	System Development Corporation Search Service (SDC) 2500 Colorado Avenue Santa Monica, CA 90406 (800) 421-7229 (toll-free) (213) 829-7511	42	31

Initiating Services

BRS

Users have three options in accessing the BRS service.

1. Hourly contract access requires the user to purchase a contract for service that guarantees a minimum number of hours of usage per month. Minimum period is six months.
2. Annual subscription access provides a user with specified total number of connect hours usable any time during the year. Available at four different price levels for 60 to 480 connect hours.
3. Group membership access available to groups/consortia that can guarantee a total use of at least 160 connect hours per month, with discounts for greater volume.

DIALOG

No start-up, minimum or subscription fees. User pays for connect hours and for citations which are printed and mailed. Rates vary on the databases used. User will receive a unique DIALOG password and complete instructions after submitting a completed DIALOG order form.

ORBIT

No startup fees or minimums are required to use SDC Search Service. Complete SDC's standard agreement form or issue a purchase order that refers to the agreement. SDC Search Service will then provide a unique password for accessing the system, give instructions for logging in, and send the ORBIT User Manual and all database supplements ordered. SDC will send a new-user package that includes one free copy of the new ORBIT Quick-Reference Guide.

Using the Services

All vendors recommend that users learn to use their systems and databases through a combination of several methods:

1. studying user manuals
2. obtain training from experienced user
3. user training workshops (new-user and update). BRS, DIALOG, and ORBIT offer new-user training which they recommend for efficient use of their systems and databases.

Update Information

Vendors will supply their users with current information through newsletters (DIALOG's CHRONOLOG, BRS's Bulletin, SDC's News), manual revisions, and announcements about workshops, databases and services.

HOW TO INTERPRET DATABASE SHEETS

ACRONYM:	Used because databases often have long and descriptive titles.
NAME OF DATA BASE:	Full Name
MAJOR AREA(S):	Broad category of information included in the database.
SUBJECTS COVERED:	More detailed listing of the types of information included in the database.
SIZE OF DATA BASE:	Number of records to date accessible through computer searching.
DATE ESTABLISHED:	Year database founded; may include materials prior to this date (usually five years earlier).
PUBLICATIONS/ PRINT JOURNALS:	Printed (or hard copy) publication(s) explaining or supplementing the database.
UPDATE FREQUENCY:	How often new information is added.
THESAURUS/SEARCH AIDS:	Any guides available to facilitate search of the database.
TYPES OF SOURCE DOCUMENTS:	Kinds of documents or materials from which information included in the database is found.
FORMS OF RETRIEVABLE INFORMATION:	Various formats in which information is retrieved: title only, title and author, descriptors, abstracts, long or short citations, etc.
DOCUMENT COPIES AVAILABLE:	Whether the original source documents are available, in what form, and where to order.
REMARKS:	Any other useful information.
INFORMATION CONTACT:	Person representing the organization responsible for building the database; someone who can tell you about how to search it, what is in it, how to access it, etc.
DATE VERIFIED:	Date information was checked with database supplier.
SYSTEMS/VENDORS:	Commercial organization that makes the database available online.
CONDITIONS:	Circumstances under which database can be accessed.

ACRONYM:	AAHPER - IRUC
NAME OF DATA BASE:	Physical Education and Recreation for the Handicapped: Information and Research Utilization Center (IRUC)
MAJOR AREA(S):	Physical education/adapted physical education, recreation/therapeutic recreation, health, dance, safety, sports, aquatics, camping, movement, perceptual-motor, outdoor education for handicapped persons of all ages
SUBJECTS COVERED:	Publications, periodicals, research (published/unpublished), child-use and professional materials dealing with physical education/adapted physical education, recreation/therapeutic recreation, sports, dance/rhythms, camping/outdoor education, movement, motor/perceptual motor, health, safety, aquatics/swimming, and related areas involving impaired, disabled, and handicapped persons.
SIZE OF DATA BASE:	Continues to grow including books, periodicals, newsletters, research reports, project reports, curriculum materials/guides, etc.
DATE ESTABLISHED:	IRUC - 1972; unit on programs for the handicapped, 1968
PUBLICATIONS/ PRINT JOURNALS:	Information Updates --brief summaries of current literature IRUC Briefings --newsletter (four times per year)
UPDATE FREQUENCY:	Monthly (Information Updates)
THESAURUS/SEARCH AIDS:	Requests are presented in individual's own words; key descriptors are requested from individual to assist in search. Search aids for staff and internal purposes only.
TYPES OF SOURCE DOCUMENTS:	Over 250 journals, newsletters, and other periodicals received regularly.
FORMS OF RETRIEVABLE INFORMATION:	Publications, newsletters, and xeroxed copies of reports, unpublished materials, and other fugitive items.
DOCUMENT COPIES AVAILABLE:	Yes
REMARKS:	IRUC basically is not computerized (some resource listings and information about programs are computerized). Use is not restricted although some services and materials are on a differential cost basis for members and non-members of AAHPER. Users may call or write with requests for referrals or specific information.
INFORMATION CONTACT:	Julian U. Stein or Wanda Born AAHPER - IRUC 1201 - 16th Street, N.W. Washington, D.C. 20036 (202) 833-5547/4396

Abstract: Workers who move up from skilled or unskilled labor status to supervisory positions must of necessity make greater use of reading skills. The Department of Commerce Employee Development Branch has devised a special reading improvement program to meet the particular needs of supervisors. The program's objectives are (1) to develop flexibility of reading speed; (2) to improve reading comprehension and retention; and (3) to apply reading skills to job-related reading materials that present special problems representative of those encountered by supervisors.

CURRENT READING TASTES OF YOUNG ADULTS.

Gottsdanker, Josephine S; Pidgeon, E. Anne
(U. of California, Santa Barbara) and , (U. of California, Santa Barbara).

J. of Higher Educ. 1969 40(5): 381-385.

A study of questionnaires from 300 students (half with unusually high aptitude scores) showed that 40 percent of the authors they mentioned were in fiction, 20 percent of the reading was social and political commentary, and 10 percent was religious. Clearly the major concern was a quest for personal meaning. "The heart of the list might even be interpreted as a vignette of the hippy orientation." The high scoring students tended toward less conservative choices than those in the cross section. The authors suggest that the college program "could perhaps keep in closer touch with students by providing a critical discussion of some of the popular authors whom the students find absorbing." Table, note.

WHICH ARE MORE READABLE: EDITORIALS OR NEWS STORIES?

Moznette, James; Rarick, Galen
(Pacific Northwest Bell Telephone Co.) and , (Ohio State U.).

Journalism Q. 1968 45(2): 319-321.

To determine the comparative readability of news stories and editorials, the authors used content analysis of one month's issues of two newspapers from each of the five largest metropolitan areas on the Pacific coast. Two hypotheses were formulated: 1) editorials would be easier to read than front-page news stories; 2) for editorials and news stories the first 100 words should be more difficult to read than the last 100. The Simplified Flesch Reading Ease Formula was employed and the hypotheses were supported. The median education level of adults in the five metropolitan areas was comparable to the median readability level of the editorials studied; readability level of news stories was above the median education levels. 2 tables, 3 notes.

The 14 papers in the volume are concerned with issues related to the reading ability and, more generally, the literacy of diverse groups of learners. Each section begins with questions (for example, is bilingualism associated with low IQ scores?) designed to put the main intent of the articles in focus. Three papers deal with the issues of dialect, reading materials for black students and the bilingualism of Chicano pupils. Two articles explore research on intelligence and sex factors as they relate to reading achievement. Two programs for preventing reading difficulties in young children are described, as well as three programs that have been used with students needing remedial reading instruction. Four articles examine research and programs regarding different types of adult learners. Each section includes a bibliography of books and articles said to be recently published and readily available. (Author/GW)

TO HELP DISADVANTAGED INMATES WITH LOW READING LEVELS AND THOSE CONSIDERED FUNCTIONALLY ILLITERATE, THE DRAPER CORRECTIONAL CENTER IN ALABAMA EXPERIMENTED WITH VARIOUS READING IMPROVEMENT PROGRAMS. MOST SUCCESSFUL WAS THE READING IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM USING THE PERCEPTOSCOPE. ALL APPLICANTS WHO SCORED BELOW THE SEVENTH GRADE READING LEVEL IN THE METROPOLITAN ACHIEVEMENT TEST TOOK THE PERCEPTUAL DEVELOPMENT LABORATORIES (PDL) DIAGNOSTIC READING TEST AND WERE THEN ENROLLED EITHER IN THE PHONICS PROGRAM OR IN THE INTERMEDIATE READING PROGRAM. THE PHONICS PROGRAM HELPED INMATES WHO COULD NOT FUNCTION AT THE INTERMEDIATE LEVEL KNOW ABOUT LANGUAGE SOUNDS AND DEVELOP THE ABILITY TO CONVERT SOUNDS INTO WORDS THROUGH THE PDL PHONICS TRAINING SYSTEM. THE 40-LESSON INTERMEDIATE READING PROGRAM USED LESSONS READ FROM THE SCREEN WITH SPEED CONTROLLED BY THE PERCEPTOSCOPE AND LESSONS TO IMPROVE COMPREHENSION. THE WHOLE PROGRAM WAS EFFECTIVE IN TEACHING READING SKILLS, PARTICULARLY COMPREHENSION, AND IN ENHANCING OTHER LANGUAGE SKILLS. THE EXPERIMENTAL GROUP GAINED 2.5 GRADE LEVELS. THE CONTROL GROUP HAD A .7 GAIN. THIS REPORT LISTS OTHER READING PROGRAMS USED AT DRAPER CORRECTIONAL CENTER. (NS)

This program, included in "Effective Reading Programs...", serves 250 students a year at a small-town junior college. The first- and second-year college students, primarily white, are from families earning between $6,000 and $15,000 annually. The program began in 1964 and offers two elective college reading courses that are open to college students and community adults. Minicourses in reading are also available for special-interest groups such as practical nursing majors, accelerated high school students, and local teachers. The beginning course includes an initial diagnosis of the student's skills using standardized and informal tests. With the help of the teacher, each student develops a plan for improvement using the instructional materials and machines in the reading lab. The courses are organized to meet formally twice a week for a combination of lectures, discussions, and individual work. Discussions and lectures cover such topics as the structure and functions of sentences, how to deal effectively with the reading in a specific type of course, and useful techniques in taking exams. A third hour per week is devoted exclusively to individual lab work. (RB/AIR)

Reading for the untaught -- Working with adult illiterates
 O'Donnell, Michael P.
 Reading, U. Maine, Portland-Gorham 04103
 Journal of Reading- 1973, 17 (1), 32-35. - Coden:jrdn-b
 International Reading Association, 6 Tyre Ave., P. O. Box
 695, Newark DE 19711:
 Area/Section: 035
 Descriptors: READING INSTRUCTION; LITERACY
 Index Phrase: teaching basic reading skills; adults vs.
 children;

Abstract: The commonalities and differences in teaching basic reading skills to adults and children are related.
 Undereducated adults generally must traverse the major stages of reading progress, including sensory integration at the initial stage and a stratagem for concept attainment at the intermediate and secondary levels; the crucial variables are selecting materials and employing teaching techniques that incorporate the unique interests and experiences of functional illiterates. Adult coping selections, developed at the University of Maine, Portland-Gorham "Right-to-Read" Center, written at the second reader level, are discussed as a means of providing literary training. AA

 Birmingham Right to Read Programme
 Special Education: Forward Trends- 1975, 2, 1, Mar, 8-11.
 Coden:sped-c
 Circulation Department, National Council for Special Education, Minster Chambers Southwell Notts, England
 Area/Section: 035
 Descriptors: READING INSTRUCTION; ADULT LANGUAGE; READING
 ABILITY; ENGLISH; LITERACY

Index Phrase: adult literacy programs in England;

Abstract: There is little scientific research on adult illiteracy. Functional literacy is defined as the ability to read well enough to successfully go about daily activities & job duties or to move about society normally with comprehension of printed expressions & messages. Functional illiteracy has been estimated at 3% in England. There are 2 types of programs coping with it: (1) large classes organized by local authorities; & (2) tutoring, often on a 1-to-1 basis, organized by voluntary associations. In 1974 a bill was passed in Parliament establishing the Adult Literacy Resources Agency; its Pound1,000,000, 1-year program begins in June, 1975. In the long run, local authorities must take the initiative in reaching adult illiterates. For this undertaking, professionalism will be necessary, & the right to read must be recognized. D. Reading: A Potential Source of Academic Difficulty in Medical School

Ambrosino, Robert J.; Brading, Paul L.; Noval, Lorraine K.
Albany Medical Coll, NY 12208

Journal of Reading Behavior. 1974, 6, 4, Dec, 367-373.

Coden:jrb-a

National Reading Conference, School of Education, Clemson University, Clemson SC 29631

Area/Section: 039

Descriptors: ADULT LANGUAGE; READING ABILITY; GRADUATE AND PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS

Index Phrase: reading skills as source of academic difficulty in medical school; Nelson-Denny Reading Test; freshman medical students;

Abstract: The assumption that students entering medical school have successfully developed reading skills was tested empirically in a limited setting. The Nelson-Denny Reading Test was administered to 268 entering freshmen medical students at Albany Medical College. Preliminary results indicated that in a substantial number of cases -- as evidenced by substandard performance on the test -- this assumption was incorrect. Examination of student records revealed that deficiencies in reading skills may contribute to academic failures in medical school. Further research in this area is encouraged, as it will not only enhance student success but, ultimately improve the quality of medical education itself. Modified HA

Early language development: Foundation of reading

Smith, Nila Banton

Education U Southern California Los Angeles 90007

Elementary English. 1975, 52, 3, Mar, 399-402. Coden:

eeg1-b

National Council of Teachers of English, 1111 Kenyon Rd., Urbana IL 61801

Area/Section: 032

Descriptors: CHILD LANGUAGE; NATIVE LANGUAGE INSTRUCTION; READING PROCESSES; READING ABILITY; READING INSTRUCTION

Index Phrase: early language development as foundation of reading;

Abstract: Stages of growth in early language development are chronologically discussed: (1) the gooing stage; (2) the babbling period; (3) the first stage of comprehensible speech; and (4) the period of rapid development. Beyond the age of four, growth continues at a tremendous pace; studies demonstrate that children at the age of five or six can manage language situations in nearly an adult manner. Early language development and beginning reading are alike except that reading depends on letters on a printed page, and early language on uttered words. The development of language in young children serves as a foundation for reading, and language reinforces reading throughout the school years. Several studies supporting this mutual interrelationship of growth in general language and reading ability are mentioned.

Since reading and language skills are so interrelated, effort should be directed toward making the best possible use of the language skills that children bring to school with them. S. Crinklaw

6 kits: 30 booklets, 1 audiotape cassette, 30 activity sheets, leaflet

Series: Personal Reading Modules Consumerism Series

Price: $187.00

Languages: eng

Source: flu

Doc Type: 0

Evaluation Information: This material has been reviewed by Specialized Office 3 and judged appropriate for use with the emotionally disturbed, learning disabled and educable mentally handicapped. This material has been recommended by the publisher for use with the special education classes.

This series of 6 kits is designed to teach reading and English skills through the use of relevant, high-interest materials centered around consumer education. The specified reading level of the materials ranges from 4.1 to 4.8; however, the interest level seems appropriate for senior high school students and adults. The kits are entitled: "Buying a Used Car," "Understanding Ads," "Consumerism," "Comparative Shopping," "Consumer Laws," and "Consumer Fraud."

Components of each kit include 30 copies of a 9-page booklet, an audiotape cassette providing a narration of the booklet's text, 30 copies of a 4-page skill-development worksheet and an instructional leaflet providing directions for use and an answer key for the worksheets.

Adult outcome of disabled child readers.

Herjanic, Barbara M.; Penick, Elizabeth C.

Washington U., Medical School

Journal of Special Education 1972 Win Vol. 6(4) 397-410

A review of the literature indicates that the adult outcome of children with reading problems is ambiguous because (a) only 6 published studies and 3 unpublished dissertations have focused on this topic; (b) statistical, methodological, and analytic procedures are not controlled; and (c) control groups have not been adequately used and sample populations are generally not representative of either a school or disabled reader population. Although reading disability is often associated with deviant behavior in children (e.g., psychological disturbances or delinquency), the consequences of these forms of deviancy should not be confused with the long-term results of reading disabilities alone. DOC YEAR: 1974 VOL NO: 52 ABSTRACT NO: 11977

Internal schemata for letters in good and bad readers.
Frith, Uta

Medical Research Council, Developmental Psychology Unit,
London, England

British Journal of Psychology 1974 May Vol. 65(2) 233-241

Conducted 2 experiments with a total of 86 7-12 yr olds of varying reading ability and 20 adults (students). Ss copied and reversed graphic symbols which were either normal letters, mirror-reversed letters, or letter-like shapes. Looking at reversed letters hardly affected performance, but producing reversed letters decreased speed and increased errors considerably. Since this was found also when writing with the non-preferred hand, a mechanism more abstract than muscle movements must be implicated. Results suggest the hypothesis that internal schemata for letters are acquired when learning to read. Schemata are necessary in order to recognize letters despite distortions such as occur in handwriting. An effect of schemata for letter orientation was shown by 7-yr-old good readers, but to a much lesser extent by bad readers. However, 12-yr-old bad readers showed an effect of schemata to a greater extent than good readers. One type of reading difficulty may be characterized by weakness of schemata, while another type may be characterized by dominance of schemata. Optimal reading performance may depend on the balanced integration of 2 processes: paying attention to external stimulus characteristics ('looking') as well as using internal schemata ('knowing'). (17 ref)

Books and Readers as a Subject of Research in Europe and America

Steinberg, Heinz

Free U of Berlin, Germany

International Social Science Journal, 1972, 24, 4, 744-755.

Coden: ISSJ-A

Area/Section: 0800/28 Country: France

Descriptors: EUROPE; UNITED STATES; READING

Index Phrase: Reading behavior in Europe & the US

Abstract: Some survey data on books & reading habits in various countries are discussed ie, adult F's tend to read less than M's, but those with husbands who have a U degree read more than those with husbands who don't. European res into reading, as carried out chiefly in France, the Federal Republic of Germany & the Netherlands over the past 10 yrs has received no notice in the US. In 1956, 34% of Germans answered in a Gallup survey that they were reading a book or novel at the time of the survey, vs 17% of the Amer's questioned, but there is a mythical belief that Amer's read more than Europeans. Caution is advised in computer correlating any series of figures with any other. More detailed statistics are needed & factor analyses must be made of motivations for reading. More psychol'ial than sociol'ial res may be required in the future; econ'ts & historians also have a vital contribution to make. It would be desirable that dispersed res be concentrated in the hands of instit's working in a continuous manner, nat'l ones, & at least 1 internat'l one. The main task there should be to promote comparability of the individual results from time to time, & map out an overall picture which could be particularly useful to developing countries. M. Maxfield

Purpose: 1. To see if a preschool child can learn to read two languages, English and Spanish. 2. To see if there is transfer from written to oral Spanish, the subordinate language.

Subjects: Mariana Past, from age 2 to 4 or 5.

Methods: Reading instruction is basically that developed by Glenn Doman, that is, a whole word approach, with the child arriving at rules and generalizations internally.

The child's Spanish environment is limited to several children's TV programs, visits with friends, and home conversation of approximately one or two hours per day.

Findings: 1. The reading program has been very successful. Mariana's English has been informally evaluated at a third grade level; her Spanish reading ability is comparable. 2. Transfer is more difficult
